RED SLAB POTTERY

Red Slab Pottery was created to put the natural artistry and materials of Victoria, Tarlac on the map. The company's main advocacy is to be a lifestyle change agent for the community through pottery design.

The company mainly uses secondary clay deposits which are abundant in the municipality. With the expertise of local artisans, their slabs and tiles are hand-slapped into molds, while the jars are hand-thrown using a mechanized wheel. The jars, dishes, planters and bowls are then fired in a traditional wood kiln and carbonized in an open fire. This results in authentic products that are ethnic in inspiration, but brought into the present with contemporary aesthetics.

Red Slab Pottery efforts have met with quite the success. Their products can be found at prestigious outlets such as the Ayala Museum gift shop, Rustans Department Store Filipiniana Section, Hey Kessy in Alabang, Lime and Basil in Alfonso, Gen, Mdse. in Escolta, and Earth Kitchen in Katipunan.

PRIZMIC&BRILL

True to form, Boho design is known today for its conspicuous use of exuberant colors, textures, and patterns, as well as its flagrant disregard for the rules of conventional design. Boho design is an essentially contested style, and as such it constantly resists being classified into a singular genre, leaving ample space for different interpretations and adaptations.

Prizmic & Brill adapted the characteristics of Boho design to create these free-spirited, unconventional, and eclectic items. The items featured in this new line utilize eclectic color palettes, elaborate patterns, global influences, and well-worn and naturalistic finishes.

They are designed for lounging purposes; they are low to the ground, created using natural materials, and, in some cases, equipped with plush cushioning. Given these features, the boho line lends itself to maximalist settings defined by, among other things, a lack of structure, a warm and earthy backdrop, ambient lighting, and the presence of botanicals, accessories, trinkets, and the like.

URATEX

Under a santol tree, Robert G. Cheng, founder of Uratex, started his dream of providing high-quality foams and affordable mattresses for every Filipino to lie on. Together with his wife Natividad Y. Cheng, they built Polyfoam Chemical Corporation in 1968 with a capital of Php 4,000 and the help of 10 employees.

The Uratex promise to produce high-quality mattresses Filipinos can afford began when Robert and Natividad Cheng established the Polyfoam Chemical Corporation. In its perseverance to pursue this vision, it invested in world-class research and development to produce high-grade foams. Since then, the brand has grown to become the most recognized household name in the bedding industry, making the Uratex brand synonymous with quality.

URATEX

Diversifying the business portfolio of Uratex RGC Group paved the way for offering specialized foam for electronics and automotive seating. It also began supplying textile, food packaging, and original automotive equipment manufacturer (OEM) products.

Today, the proudly Filipino-owned company has expanded business operations in factories and showrooms nationwide. With the growth and expansion, the group has also strengthened its commitment to corporate social responsibility through advocacy projects and sustainability programs.

URATEX

Adoption of renewable energy, installation of solar rooftops, deployment of Electric Vehicles (EVs), and Tree Planting activities are some of the sustainable business practices of Uratex RGC Group aiming to protect the natural environment and save the planet.

Uratex RGC Group operates nationwide with 25 factories and 18 showrooms.
